Excluded Either for Aiding Axis or Being Governed

LISBON—One of U.N.'s most serious defects is that the small powers in Europe are much under-represented. Sweden, Southern Ireland, Switzerland, Portugal, Spain, Turkey and Italy are all excluded from membership—the first six because they were neutral, Italy because she was one

Of these seven excluded nations, the one which perhaps has the least chance of admission is Portugal. Two objections are generally urged against the entry of Portugal into the League of Nations. Either it is said that they helped the Axis more than they helped the Allies, or that they are governed by Fascist or semi-Fascist regimes. On both these accounts, Portugal is usually challenged comparison with Argentina, which has been admitted.

It is true to say that no other nation has been so generous in services to the Allied cause as did

Editor, Bulletin: May I be permitted a few lines in your paper sincerely to thank Captain Harper

Small neutral rendered such services to the Allied cause as did Portugal. Portugal's attitude was one of complete impartiality and considerations and her help to the Allies was not influenced by love of the Allies. Though her aid certainly had a powerful sentimental influence on public opinion, like every other country's her aid was given primarily and exclusively by self-interest. The fact

Being a service policeman I can readily agree with him that the service police work can be done as well or better than it has been and has been done as well by the Commissionaires. With the majority of the men anxious to get out of the service, the policy of selective discharge policy is can be conduct was governed almost exclusively by the military and that this small country rendered the Allies great services was due to the fact that the country had the good luck that she was governed by Salazar, one of the ablest of men. He was a man to whom he was able to take a long-sighted view of the future of the country.

The first great service which Portugal rendered the Allies was the process of joining the Axis powers. This process started in 1930, when Salazar was appointed prime minister of Portugal. This pact was further reinforced by successive agreements.

and thoroughly fed up with the evasive discharge policy it can be seen that the force suffers accordingly.

The service policy, however, are not in complete agreement with the impatient with the air force refusal to discharge men. Everywhere it is a matter of fact that the force is with nothing to do and anxious to return to civilian life being held in the barracks. The force is anxious to formulate a discharge policy. We have had words and vague promises that the force will be discharged. Charges are few and far between.

The Army has a definite point

Portugal. There were several times when it seemed as if Spain would be partly forced and partly tempted into the war on the side of the Axis. Invariably, Salazar used his influence to keep Spain neutral.

He not only told Franco but also told the Germans that, if Spain became a belligerent on the Axis side, Portugal would automatically forced to fulfill her first treaty obligation to Great Britain and enter the war on the side of the Allies. There she was met by this influence, exerted patient and continuously over many years, exercised a decisive effect in keeping Spain out of the war.

It is well known that Salazar stood in this matter as strongly the little-known fact that, on the night the Allies landed in North Africa, in November, 1942, he sent a message to Churchill in Lisbon saying "I wish I could help."

The author has been made responsible for the maintenance of wheel chairs and other equipment. If it is allowed to deteriorate as it is at present I can well say that many wheel chairs will not have a chance to be used in a very short time.

Many of these chairs have been supplied by service organizations, but some of those for whom use they are provided, are, I am sorry to say, ignorant of their value. They apparently are under the idea that they will soon be out of them and to ask him to use his influence to deter Franco from intervention, and all who fought in the North African campaign can judge how disastrous, and possibly fatal, Spanish intervention might have been at that particular moment.

Some risk of German reprisals was inherent in this decision and, if service to the Allied war effort is to continue to be one criterion by which fitness for membership in UNO is to be judged, this service certainly ranks high among those rendered by non-combatants.

As to the other criterion—whether Portugal's regime is too racist to make her a worthy member of UNO—I shall try to give a passionate appraisal in my next column.

Seots In London

Edinburgh Scotsman

The proportion of Seots in London is probably larger than it was before the war. Are there any fur-opportunities for young men and women from Scotland in London? There are. For every hardworking and ambitious young Scot there is scope in every walk of life in London today. Any trade or profession one can mention is open to exceptional scope for advance- ment for young men and women today. The road may not be easy, but the of opportunity greater than elsewhere. How could it be otherwise in a community of about nine million people of all nationalities?
